The Technical Standards and Safety Authority (TSSA) aims to keep Ontarians safe every day. We also look to continuously strengthen our relations with Ontario business and stakeholders – to help them improve their safety and adhere to provincial safety regulations and standards.

With this, TSSA is announcing a change in the time allotted to submit appeals for inspection-related fees, seals and orders. There is now a 90-day time limit to submit any such appeals.

This change marks another way TSSA is working to improve processes with Ontario businesses, with the overall goal of putting public safety first.

Please note: By law, as of March 22, 2017, all appeals of inspector seals, orders and/or fees must now be filed within 90-days of notice. The 90 days begins at the date of invoice (appealing fees) or the date of the inspection (appealing orders).

Appeals submitted after a 90-day period will no longer be considered.
Please also note that TSSA began enforcing the law April 24, 2017
